> It has excited some surprise and remark that the radicals in Cougress should have so persistently pressed forward the confiscating bill, when the former hostility of the President to the proposed alterations is so well known. Why nudertake to pass a bill which it is known the President will veto, and especially why should this be done by his own

How mortifying it is not to be able to find more heroic and patriotic reason for this. How sgreeable it would be, out of the many reasons which have been given by the friends of the measure, to twist a golden chain of ergument with no alloy of baser metal in it. How satisfactory to feel that in releasing our hold upon the Constitution we had done so to grasp with firmer hand a more secure support and to believe that such noble motives im pelled the favorers of the measure.

It would be gratifying to suppose that, even though the measure was an error, its adocates were actuated by the single wish to destroy the rebellion. It would be something to feel that the object arose from a mietaken out pardonable zeal to advance the interests and unity of the party which they conscientiously believed to be the only one that could preserve the Union.

Alas, however, patriotism, zeal, or party unity are neither one, we fear, the moving causes of this most extraordinary measure. It is caused by the single reason that there cannot be two Presidents of the United States at the same time. As there cannot be, one spirant must be sacrificed. This measure, ike a keen knife, cuts off a smooth edge beween the President and the friends of Mr. Chase. If he succeeds, he leses whatever faint pretensions to constitutionalism and conservatism he may have pretended to. If he is time to his opinions of a year ago he is cut off from the leading spirits of his own party, the shrickers and strikers who will at onee go en messe for Chase, who is not trouoled with such nice scrupies.

That is the whole object and intent. Some odinm and responsibility of not going the ennot expect him to sign it, but they do expect

With this understanding, it is very what they cost, they can return them and we will refund clear that the passage of the bill by the Lower House was a decided victory of the Chase wing of the Republican party, and as such the country will most certainly regard it. The Senate will, most certainly, adopt the same conrec, and thus will be organized a powerful may, however, avoid this, by taking back his cen known to charge his mind semi-annually upon political questions, this is very possible. Just at this time, when these seeds of divison appear at the Capital, the people of Kentucky are entertained by signs of a disruption among the faithful in our State. Thus it is that all who oppose the old Demociatic party find themselves but feebiy nuited, because the Uulon is not founded np on principle, but some less Sim foundation and are in danger of disintegration at all times. We can see one wing of the late soeathed Union party of Kentucky gravitating to their natural position with the Democracy, while the other, by the same law, seeks afilliation. Well, we are ready to welcome them, and throw a charitable vell over their past errors. We warn them that they will be called traitors, but will have a consolation impossi ble to their opponents: that they do not deserve the name. They will, perhaps, learn what the feeling is about military interference in elections when they are at a different end of the bayonet from last summer. It will be found to have a very enlightened effect upon their opinions of the constitutionality of such interference.

Still it is possible, but not probable, that in the dissensions of these radicals, who are quarraling over spoils not won yet, we may neceed in marching into power, and then to send these incane families to the saylum where Dumas, jr., has been a hypochondriac for years, fearful that he might die of consumption. He lives, therefore, very methodically, soberly and economically. He has no library, and reads only two books—the Bible and Shakspeare. His reason for turning his back on all books is that, as he says, books destroy one's imagination. He says, if you read what others wrote, you will do what others have done, and repeat with small veriations what they have said. Look on men and things with your own eyes, depict what you see, think over the sights you observe and things with your own eyes, depict what you see, think over the sights you observe maturely, and so create something. At one time Dumas was a great cigar-smoker, says the Peris correspondent of the New Orieans Picayune. He would smoke twenty-five or thirty a day. By the way, the Emperer used to smoke fifteen a day, and times it hard now to smoke fewer in the course of the feur and twenty hours. One day he was sitting fully in the drawing room at Monte Cristo. His eye fell upon some medical treatise. He opped it at the page where enlectine was treated of. He read it for want of something better to do. He found not only that nicotine (wbish is, as you know, the acthat nicotine (which is, as you know, the active principle of tobaces) was one of the mess powerful poisons known, but that tobacco, taken even in small quantities, daily exerted, in consequence of the active principle it contained, the misst permiclous influence upon the human intellect, and assistment the contained. human intellect and system, and this, even when smoking or chewing was not indulged to excess. SALTING HAY .- A correspondent of the Country Gentleman says he abandoned the old practice of putting salt on hay, as it adds to its moisture instead of lessening. This opinion is backed with a will by a writer for the Boston Cultivator, who lays down the law, as he understands it, in the following unequivocal manner: "It is time this absurd custom was done away. It is beyond conception how so transparent a humbur ever got so wide-appread. Every particle of sait used on lay is a positive injury to it. The practice of hay is a positive injury to it. The practice of salting hay cught to be almost as much discounteranced and discouraged as though it were actual poison. Men will make almost superhuman exertions to get their hay up dry, and then immediately wet it with salt."

"Rightcousness exulteth a nation."—¡Proverbs xiv., 3t. The term righteonsness is employed in the ext to signify a life directed and governed by fext to eignify a life directed and governed by the laws of the Bibls. The meaning, ther, of thlapsasage of Seriplure is accurately express-ed by the following language. The principles of revealed religion are indispensably necesof revealed religion are indispensably necessary to perpenate the existence, prace, welfare, prosperity, and happiness of a nation.

Yen are aware, my friends, that grass, flowers, shrubs, trees, and all other vegetable organizations in our world have their laws of birth, origin, and progress; their laws of bealth, vigor, maturity, decline, decay, death, and dissolution. You know that all animals are born, grow up, reach a culminating point, and then return to be mingical with the life-less elements whence they were taken. Now less elements whence they were taken. Now, it is a general opinion among learned men that by laws equally eterned and resistiess nations have their origin, rise up through the serveral gredations of infancy, childhood, youth, mature years, and then sink gradually down to age, decreptude, weakness, and the grave. For myself, I cannot subscribe to such a dark and melancholy doctrine I; seems to me plain, that the essential elements of national existence and welfare are not material like those which enter into the composition of a shrub, tree or brute. To be sure, each fuccessive generation of which a nation consists has its limits with respect to the mortal and visible; but the mind—the spirit of a nation, for eight that I can see to the ef a nation, for aught that I can see to the contrary—may live, grow more free, enlight-ened, pure and happy, even to the end of lime. It should be remembered that the national which existed in former ages were destroyed, not by physical, but by moral cases. The

Besides, we read in the Old Testament that the Creator promised the Hebrew nation a perpetual, everlasting existence, on their complying with certain conditions prescribed by the Jewish law-giver, Mes a. Now, allow me to ask, would it be consistent with the perfections of the Infinite, to make a promise that could not be fulfilled without violating the established laws of the nuiverse—without reducing our world to its original chaos and reconstructing or building it up agoin on a new plain; giving to it snother and far difference when the property of the souther and far difference without the property of the souther and far difference without the property of the souther and far difference when the property of the souther and far difference when the property of the souther and far difference when the property of the souther and far difference when the property of the souther and far difference when the property of the souther and far difference when the property of the souther and far difference when the property of the souther and far difference when the property of the souther and far difference when the property of the souther and far difference when the property of the souther and far difference when the property of the souther and far difference when the property of the souther and the new plain; giving to it another and far different economy? I must be permitted, therefore, to believe, without the slightest qualification or drawback, in the declaration of the text, that the religion of the Bible has power to perpetuate the existence, peace, and prosperity of a nation forever

I propose, in the first place, to direct your attention to some popular and prevailing craroes with respect to the means of national craroes. altation and glory. In all the printed works on political science, either ancient or modern, the position is assumed that a perfectly good government, falthfully administered, furnishes ample means for promoting and perpetuating the welfare of communities, States and nations. In my judgment this seuiment is an error, which has a most inanspi-tious bearing on the social interests of mau-aind. Reflect, that a civil government, under li possible circumstances, is nothing but a all possible circumstances, is nothing but a system of external means or measures designed to prevent and suppress the commission of actions which in the view of taid government are injurious to the public goot. Reflect, again, that mental philosophers, and disines of every school, agree that the outward conduct of men is invertably the consequence of their of their leading and predoutlent. waves, the tides and seasons. A perfect system of civil law can no more destroy a single bad action by a direct it fluence than create a planet or roll this earth in its spona orbit around the sun. Solemn, mel metholy lact! In addition, there is a multitude of actions

Our city would be come a paradise. All our city would be mid, meek, gentle, and forgiving in temper, just, nseful and beneficent in their actions. It is also plain that if love to God and love to men religned the every human soul, in every family, school, church, legislature and class of society, then all moral abominative for the space of a single mouth; but as it malutaln the peace and order of any community for the space of a single mouth; but as it exists in our world, it is always bleuded with other influences, which render it an unspeakable blessing. In the department of physical rature there are elements which, alone and unmingled, exert a deleterious effect uron the human frame; but when united with other substances, they become pleasant and sainbrious. The atmosphere, it is well known, is composed of two ingredients, one of which we cannot inhale without being destroyed; but when inliked with nother back, in the nother body, it forms a compound which is the pabulum of life to the whole vegetable and sainmal creation. So government, in itself a harsh and stern prin-

cipic, blended with the family influence, the church, the school, the press and Christian philanthropy, contributes more than words can express to promote the social order and improvement of man.

Some philosophers think that civilization, if properly directed, is sufficient to secure and build up the happiness of a nation. We often hear the sentiment expressed that it is unwise to attempt to christianize the heathen rations before they are civilized; as if civiliza-tion were of itself a moralizing process. Every one admits the lumense superiority, in nany respects, of the civilized above the bar-barious state. Civilization, if I may be allow-ed the figure of speech, build our houses, provides our tables and wardsches prokesses. rovides our tables and wardrobes, makes our streets, reads, bridges, vessels, and throws around as ell the material comforts, luxuries and conveniences of life. It also returnes from the exterior of man and seciety those rude, vulgar, disgusting manners and habits that characterize savages. But the same remarks which were made under the preceding head of our discourse are applicable to this topic. Civilization cannot control these passions of the heart, whence all human conduct emanates. Suppose every man in this city to be a perfect gentlaman in outward department, and every woman completely refined in appearance and manners. Suppose that we lived in palaces of spieudor, with the resources of a boundless wealth flowing around us; and havlor nothing to do but to spend our time amid smiles and galety, the forms of civility and fashion, the sounds of sunice and pleasure. Even then it is plain our hearts might be the seats of unresisted nd conveniences of life. It also removes our hearts might be the seats of vursisted vice, crimes, and follies. We might be, in the sight of God, corrept and upprincipled, the eyes of mat, an outside smooth as the marble wrought by the chisel of the sculptor late the elegancies and proportions of the human form divine.

which existed in former ages were destroyed, not by physical, but by moral cages. The school boy has learned that Assyria of old. Babylon, Rame, Carthage and other ancient empires were ruined by the deletrious consequence of ignorance, enortacus vices and immoralities. It is self-evident that, so long as the majority of a nelion remain latelligent and virtnous, it cannot be overthrown, except by the hand of Omnipotence.

Besides, all concede that the laws which govern civilization are not those of a lofty and govern civil ness does not happen to be the reigning felly of the place where they live. But abstract arguments are not required to settle this sub-

Reflect, again, that mental philosophers, and divines of every school, agree that the outward conduct of men is invariably the consequence of effect of their leading and precominant passions. As by an inevitable necessity water drowns, fire burns, cold freezes, polson kills, and rivers can rise no higher than their fonctions, so a man's external life is made and power of intellect that have never been avoidably determined by the mental principles which bold swey in his mind. It is impossible, therefore, to control the social conduct of men, except by means that have power to reach and determine the dictates of their hearts or strongest affections. This is an achievement forever beyond the resources of civil government. Legislators are just as unsable to direct the wild passions of the human soil as they are to govern the winds and converded in the control of the conduct of the resources of civil government. Legislators are just as unsable to direct the wild passions of the human soil as they are to govern the winds and conversed the billows of cocan, which full in unavailing fury on the more of soil to the end of time. constantly breathes the kindly influence of His love and spirit, as the zephyr breathes upon and animates the opening flowers and beauties of the vernal season—a heart enamored of all that is true and good, beantiful and great. Such a heart the Saviour teaches us is the foundation of all true moral excellence, and the source of all the blessings enjoyed by the good on earth or the good in heaven. In the next place Jesns tells us that inseparably connected with the abovementioued centiments towards the Creator is a heart beating in unison with our fellow-man proving our neighbor as ourselves. The goepel takes the man who is wholly absorbed in shoul pursuits, raises him from the horrible pursuit and mire clay of invincible, obdurate past, the laws have been constantly changing, to meet the ceaseless modifications of crime. But he adds: "In proportion as law has abounded crime has much more abounded." So it has been in all climes and ages. Just in proportion to the refinement and multiplication of law have been the refinement and multiplication of transgression.

No longer making binself the undivided object of his care, efforts and solicitude, he looks around upon the community to which he belongs with the divine feelings of fraternal attachment. In the seventh chapter of Romans similar centiments are recorded by the pen of inspiration. It is there affirmed that no system of more law however perfected is able to a similar of the seventh chapter of t fices to promote their good, and he feels him-self more than compensated for these cou-tributions to the public weel, by the refluent tide of augmented happiness which flows back npon his own soul in thirty, sixty or an hundred fold increase.

Besides, all concede that the laws which govern civilization are not those of a lofty and unbending rectitude. These laws may be ranged under two heads—first, the law of ease; secondly, the law of fashion. The former allows a heart to be given up to supreme and predominant selfshores. The latter tolerates all sections which beer the stamp of the best and most established usage, however immoral in their principles or tendencies. Fashion erects her sitar and its votaries fall down and worship with a blind, implicit and unscrupulous homage. It is admitted that Athens, at the agr of Pericles, had reached the acme of civil ization. In refinement she had never beer their hearts, their fortunes, their honor and their lives. The preservation of the Scriptures is one of the most interesting the gross habits and tastes of beauty first alighted in her descent from heaven, to refine the gross habits and tastes of orbarous ite. There political freedom was born, and first hurled defiance at the bunded millions of a world's despotism. There the argand graces danced atound man in the primitive ages of the world—filled his house with comforts; bordered his path with roses, boand his

You may feel inclined to ask what is there in the Bible which enables it to produce such comprel'-ensive and magnificent results? In what ranner can it supply that desideration with all legislators, statesmen, philosophers of addivines, the suppression af social evils by the annihilation of their cause? In answering these questions, I will not offer you any speenlations of uninspired men. I will simply set before you the off-repeated declarations of the Son of God touching this subject. By Him we are assured that all the practical laws of the Bible are comprised in these two principles. First—a heart which beats in unison with that of the great Father—a heart that with that of the great Father—a heart that which the that of the great Father—a heart that delights above all things to commune with Him—that is erriched in some humble degree with his own intellectual, moral and modyleg splenders—a heart on which the Almighty constantly breather the kindly in a way of the way of the control of the co column this morning.

One of the most during attempts at highway relibery which we have been called upon to record, occurred on Friday night, about 11 o'clock, in one of the central thoroughfares of the city, and not far from the courthouse, maining in the Medical Director's office, A gentleman by the name of Lowis Cox, a Louisville, Ky, February 14th, 1864, viz: Stranger in the city, it being a pleasant evering, was quietly walking around to view the city and to mak calls upon some few acquaintarces he had residing here. During his strell he chareed to get upon Grayson street, and be had just passed the corner of Six h when he was accosted by three rufflans, who demanded that he should go with them, at the same time scizing hold of him and forcing him along. Mr Cox, seeing in whose bands he had failen, immediately shouted for the police. The villains, fearing that this would attract the attention of the neighbors, struck Mr. Cox several times in the face with a pair of brass kuncks, knecking him senseless to the ground. They then commerced dragging the senseress form of Mr. Cox into an alley, which was near, with the evident intention of rebbing him.

Officer Joel Lambourne, who was near, hearing the cry of "watch," immediately started in the direction from which the noise came. The cowardly assassins, hearing some one approach fied in different directions, one of them jumping over a back fence into the yard of a house where some free negroes live. Officer Lambourne seeing him, followed, and, when entering the yard, he was told by one of the negroes who lives in the house that the man had gone up stairs. The thief hearing this jumped out of the second story window and started down the street, the officer starting in pursuit. The chase was kept up for some five equires, the officer firing at the to be erected at Cave Hill Cemetery a floc thief twice without effect. Proposition to "Equalize" Soldiers. Counterseiters Escape from Jail. XXXVIIIth Congress-First Session.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, February 13. A report from the Secretary of War was received in answer to a resolution relative offi-cers' commutation for quarters and fuel. It shows there are 597 officers here drawing such commulation, viz. 9 Major-Generale, 18 Brig. Generale, 34 Colonels, 18 Lieut. Colonels, 24 Majors, 126 Captains, 48 Lieutenanis, 26 Surgeons, 18 Asst. Surgeons and 79 Paymasters. On motion of Mr. Wilsou the Souate proceeded to consider the bill equalizing the pay of United States soldiers. of United States soldiers.

Mr. Conness withdrew his amendment conferring the benefits to those in scrylcc at the time of the passage of the amendment. Mr. Sumper effered an emendment provid-re that in eases where the Secretary of War art, shaller chered as incament provid-reg that in cases where the Secretary of War shall be satisfied that persons of color have been mustered into the service of the United States at the rate of $13 per month they shall e paid at that rate for previous services.

Mr. Grimes bened the Senator would with traw his proposition, and that from this time forward every soldier was to have the sain the hoped the bill might be allowed to

Mr. Wilson moved to strike out the clause the bill in the case governing colored troops, the same psy, &c., except bounty during the whole time they have been in the service.

Mr. Sumner would not withdraw his amendant without explaining that its provisions ment without explaining that its provisions would only apply to a few regimen's and there would be no great drught on the treasury.

Mr. Fessenden here claimed the floor and from the Flance Comminee reported certain amendments to the House defletency bill. He salted that they lie over till Moday Mr. Sunner, said, if the block men of Maryl and were as good as the black men collected elsewhere, why make executions; if justice were done, according t the Sanator from Massichustis, some $500 000 would be taken from the Trea-nry, or as he understood, about $1,500,000, all should be puld alike, why did not Massachu-Mr. Festenden soil that he understood that he pay had been offered but that the colored troops refused to receive it.

Mr. Wilson explained the circumstances under which the colored troops refused to review their pay. They held the Government to the pledges made to them, and wanted the full pay of thirteen dollars per month, or asked to be discharged from the service.

Mr. Johnson said that the they are colored. Mr. Johnson said then that they were col-red gentiemen of extraordinary sepsibilities. An amendment offered by Mr. Wilson was adopted equalizing the pay of colored troops, extending the provisions of the bill to give them an additional thirty dollars per month from January 1st, 1854.

Mr. Grimes said from the very onset he and his collegene (Mr. Harlan) revo. to fearer of Mr. Grimes said from the very onset he and his colleague (Mr. Harlen) were in favor of putting negro troops on an equality with the whites. He was in recrds in these respects before the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. Sumner) said that while he was in favor of carrying war into Africa, he was more in favor of carrying the African into the war. If we were going back to pay teese colored troops from Massachusetts, &c., why not pay those for Tennosser? He was informed there were some thirty regiments of these troops those for Tennesser? He was informed there were some thirty regiments of these troops there. He thought there was trouble to be apprehended from making the retrospective character of the bill indiscriminate. He sympathized with the gallout and patriotic young men of the Fifty-fourth and Fifty fills Massachusetts (colored) troops; but he could not chusetts (colored) troops; but he could not consider the fifty-fourth and Fifty fills Massachusetts (colored) troops; but he could not consider the fifty-fourth and Fifty fills Massachusetts (colored) troops; but he could not consider the fifty-fourth and Fifty fills Massachusetts (colored) troops; but he could not consider the fifty regiments of these troops the first of the public printing and binding, passed in 1861 and 1862; referred to the Committee on Revised Statutes.

Mr. FIELD—Select Committee—A bill to enlarge the Shepherdsylle voting district in chusetts (colored) troops; but he could not believing that it was on account of their ac-tion that the colored men of the South Caroha regiments refused to receive their pay.

BOSTON, February 13. The correspondent of the Boston Herald The correspondent of the Boston Herald, writing from the fleet off Charleston, describes the destruction of the blockede rauner as follows: 'Off Charleston very early this morning some daring Englishman made a bold attempt, just before day and during a fog, to run the blockede. He succeeded in getting in as far as the mouth of the harbor, where he was run ashore by trying to avoid the shells from our batteries, which were flying in every direction. The fog soon cleared up, and there direction. The fog soon cleared up, and there was the blockade runner, hard and fast on the beach. He was a spleudid looking sidewheel steamer with two smoke-stacks and rakish masts. The express passenger train which left Canden-street depot on Thursday night for Wheeling, was captured by a company of rebels near Kearneyswille depot, eight miles west of Harper's Ferry. The train was there turrounded by rebels, and a number of armed men entered the cars. The passingers, among whom, of course, there was great consternation, were more or less molested in the shape of ransons. Some produced green shape of ransoms. Some produced green backs, others watches, dismond rings, etc., as equivalents for their liberty. We are informed by one of the sufferers, who returned by the express train yesterday, that the aggregate amount of money was not less than $-6,000, while the value of the jewelry was larger. nrged the reference of the bill with his in-struction.

Before final action on the motion the hour arrived for the orders of the day, ORDERS OF THE DAY.

The Senate resumed the consideration of "a ill to provide a civil remedy for injuries done disloyal persons."

by distoyal persons."

The peuding question was Mr. READ's motion to strike out the second section of the bill. [This 21 section allows the previous character of a person for loyalty or distoyalty to be given in evidence.]

Mr. FISK addressed the Senate against the motion reasons. motion to strike out. He replied to the arguments of Senator SAMPSON and others, made on yesterday, in support of the motion to strike ont.
Mr. ROBINSON addressed the Senate at length in favor of the amendment to strike out the second section of the bill. He replied to Mr. FISK'S argument against it.

Mr. WHITAKEN replied to Mr. ROBINSON
at considerable length and opposed the amendment to strike out the second section. the also replied to the arguments of Mesars MARSHALL, McHENRY and EAMPSON made on yesterday on the bill and amendment. Br. BRISTOW addressed the Scrate in oposition to the motion to strike out the second section of the bill. There were some detects in the blll which at the proper time he would move to amend. But the striking out of the second section would entirely destroy all of the usefulness and vitality of the whole of the law. He spoke at length in opposition to the motion to strike out and in favor of the general principles of the bill.

And then the Senate adjourned.

Louisville Stock Market. SHELBY HOUSE. SATURDAY, Feb. 13, 1864. Another week is past without producing any mate ial change in the live stock market at the Shelby House. The receipts of all kinds of live stock have een heavy, and a good feeling to speculate has proval ed among the shippers South and East. The Butch ers were buying liberally all that they needed for their ustom. The Government buyers have bought but few and considering all these facts, a hrisk and heavy basi ness has been done, so that all kinds of stock were sold as fast as they arrived, and drivers realized fine price for their stock. Cattle—The arrivals have been fair and prices have ruled steady and firm, with an apwar tendency. The supply of heavy spring cattle is no equal to the demand, as there are shippers here buy for the Eastern and Southern markets.

PRICES. CATTLE-Prices ranged from $2 to $3 for comm ough; $3 50 to $4 50 for medium to good; $5 50 to $6 for heavy and extra-Hogs-The recepts were fair, and all sold at rour figers. The supply of heavy corn fed hogs were not equal to the demand. Prices ranged from $5 to $6 for ommon and rough; and $5 30 to $7 50 for good and for heavy. MULES-The receipts were heavy and the demanood for three year old and upwards. Prices ranged from $115 to $150 for four hands and upwards. RECEIPTS.

Who knows the inseru'ab'e design?
Blessed be lie who took and gave!
Why should your mother, Charles, not mine,
Be weeping at her darling's grave?
We bow to Heaven that willed it so,
That darkly rules the fate of all,
That sends the respite or the blow,
That's free to give or to recall—

So such shall mourn, in life's advance,
Dear hopes; dear friends, untimely killed;
Shall grieve for many a forfeit chance,
And tonging passion unfulfilled.
Amen! whatever fate be sent,
I'ray God the heart may kindly glow,
Although the head with cares be bent,
And whitened with the winter snow.

Come wealth or want, come good or ill. Come wealth or want, come good or III, Let young and old accept their part, And how before the awful Will, And bear 't with an honest heart, Who misses, or who wins the prize? Go, lose or conquer as you can; But If yon fail, or if yon rise, Be each, pray God, a gentleman.

[For the Louisville Sanday Democrat.] SCHOOL DAYS IN SHELBYVILLE. TIRST DAY'S EXPERIENCE.

I am going to school in Shelbyviile. My at xious parents said that "both my manners and my brains needed educating." They my trunk, and as an aromatic Egyptian mummy says not a word when placed upon the fire se a back-log, "so opened I not my mouth," as it was of no use. They sent me here. Of course I arrived as soon as I landed.

Next day I walked up town; found it a right smart locking place, filled with right smart Beauregard at Sayaunah. looking propie; bought fifteen dollars' worth of brand-new, marbie-edged books-among the number the largest dictionary I could find, as my female parent said I must learn to speak proper—gave a little nigger a dime to carry it Several Georgia Regiments Mutinied to my boarding house, and thought it a cheap jnk, a finely-written history of Clande Duval, fifty cents' worth of cigars, a new knife, and a big piece of pire upon which to exercise the aforesaid knife. I was to go to school the next day; so in sauntering to my room with a fra-grant Havana (made in Louisville) between my Apollo-Belvidere lips, I "bitterly thought of the morrow," as somebody is reported to have said some time sgo. In going to my room I was followed by a darkey with a floor-terly have my houts were right new I waid room I was followed by a darkey with a floor-cioth, but as my boots were right new, I paid no attention to her. When I did arrive there I was delighted (if that is the word) to find a red-headed boy lying on my bed, a faint imitation of Cesar Augustus reclining in my particular chair and scribbing in my particularly large dictionary, which my femsle parent wanted me to pay particular attention to, and the fast chep, though not least (for he was the biggest boy in school), was engaged in a very minute (if not scientific) examination of my trunk, in which I had unfortunately left the key. Quite a pile of apple peeling were on the floor of exactly the same color, to a streak, of the apples my femsle peering were on the noor of exactly the same color, to a streak, of the apples my female perent pecked up with my cictaes. I saluted them with as I thought, Chesterfieldian politeness. The red-headed boy grunted; Cesar Augustus asked my name, and then, with the case and composure of a courtler of the Elizabethan era, wrote it in the back of my dictionary in large letters of elyborate hearts. bethan era, wrote it in the back of tay dictionary in large letters of elaborate beanty.

"The biggeet boy in school" pulled one of my apples out of his pocket and kindly offered me a very small piece. My future teacher came in pointed me out the next day's lessens; observing my cigar, he remarked that "smoking was against the rules of the school," and charitably suggested that it "was very deleterious and permicious to the human organization." I looked in my bio bock to see what he meant, but tound no consolation (as I had quite a stock of cigars on hand). With the remark that my room-mates would inform me on school rules and other matters, he left ns. on school rules and other matters, he left us. patch states that all is quiet, notwithstanding with the rumors of a fight So far as "other matters," were concerned his prediction was verified in an eminent degree; for, after we had got quite sociable, I was informed (without much timidity on the part of the informer) that "new boys always treated to cider" and et ectera, put in the erudite and classic Cesar Augustus; that new boys made the room fire of mornings; that the teacher was ever so tight on new boys; that If new boy ever said his soul was his own he would keep him in all dinner time, and make him write four hundred lines. With such consoling remarks (so inspiriting to a new boy) the hours sped on, and after the red-headed boy had broken the little blade of my knife, and Cesar Augustus had spirted a sufficient quantity of ambrosia (tobicco juice) on my new boots, and the large specimen had caten new boots, and the large specimen had caten my last apple, and they, collectively, had (unmindful of our teacher's kind advice) smoked up the jast of my fifty cents' worth of chars, we retired to bed, if not enveloped in a cloud of glory, at least encompassed with clouds of smoke. AT SCHOOL I swoke in the morning with a start, from a dream (in which I had gone without my dinner for saying my soul was my own), to find that the sun was high in the heavens and that my kind companion had left me to sleep, "until the gong sounded," if I chose to do so. I was soon at school, but the beauty of my "stogies," as the scholars elegantly called them, were sadly dimmed in getting there. So one chance, at least, to challenge enry and admiration was gone. admiration was gone. I soon found that I was decidedly behind the times. I had no sweetheart. I didn't have a big meerschaum pipe in my nocket, ready to be slipped out at a moment's notice (as soon as the teacher's back was turned) I had all the ways of the "old man" (leacher) to learn, which, or seeing his atriking execution of Yankee Dood! on that part of a small boy established. pecially made for that purpose, I found was no easy task. I had to learn to "irip up," "shit." fall down on a foot-ball and lay on it, totally unconscious of accidental kicks, until I totally uncenseious of accidental kicks, until I had secured it, &c. &c. In school I had time to see "now the young ideas were learning to shoot." Some of them were quite advanced in the srt. A future Raphael was engaged in sketching the "old mau's" round but still handsome figure. Another was deeply engrossed in what I first thought was a geometry, but closer inspection revealed a yellow-backed pamphlet behind it, bearing a startling likeness to my Claude Daval. In a dietant backed pamphlet behind it, bearing a startling likeness to my Claude Daval. In a distant part of the room the right boy's dinner was getting into the wrong boy's mouth. The wrong boy was munching away, concealed, as he though, by his deck, and in blissful ignorance that the "old man" was eyeing him and thinking ofan appropriate true for an interesting occasion not far in the distance. For the hour of "our boys" I must say that a pale, meiancholy youth, the picture of an aspiring student, had his mind closely set upon his lesson—while his right hand, in which was a pin, was as closely engaged in keeping his neighbor from going to sleep. "Straws show which way the wind blows", and small things in life often indicate with the accuracy of the Delphic oracle, and, like the lambent flame that burned above the Roman herb of brow, feel of great events the state of the state to be. Who shall say that the coming greatness of schoolboys is not also thus shall as a control to the state of the state ifke the lambent flame that burned above the Roman hero's brow, tell of great events that are to be. Who shall say that the coming in vegue among the clau), and, although the greenbecks which my female parent had given me were "feat fading into the dim distance." greenbecks which my femile parent had given me were "fast fading into the dim distance," I proposed "to treat to cider and cligats." This was received with a shout of spplanee, and I was instantly the most popular boy in school, (which popularity latted as long as my money.) Two of my dear schoolmates (one with a big red scarf and round breast-pin, and the other, who tasked Scotch-Irisb) nobly volunteered to icad the way to the very place. We went "en mosee." The store-keeper looked so hard at me that I dropped my pocket-book and begged his perdoc. II asked if "all of the forty were coming" and said something of Goths and Vandals. I didn't know what he meant till the boys told me. While the boys were drinking their cider and smoking quite an unnecessary number of good cigars, I inadvertently stepped futo a seloon, which is a department of the same store, where I chanced to see an irscription on a card tacked up, "Boys will please pitch their teuts in the other room" Now, there was a nut to crack. Did the Sbeibyville boys carry teuts with them? or did it mean that they were Arabe? I found a terward that it was a very significant figure of speech. Our poet (he composed a whole strain on a skirmish that tock place in the town) remarked that "we had better put the lit end of our cigars up our coat sleeves and go," as it was getting near to that time so

I went to my room this evening flattering myself that I had cut the Gordian knot of persecution by the liberal outlay of greenbacks which my female parent had given me, but haunted with the unp'casant recoilection that next Friday was composition day, the events of which dreaded day I will relate in events of which dreased and another letter. Yours, truly, 1 of the 40.

[Special to the Tribune.] WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.

The delegation representing the woolgrowing interest of Pennsylvania, Western Virginia, and the eastern part of Ohio are here for the purpose of consulting with the different committees of Congress, and asking for an increased rate of duties on foreign wools, expecially those of fluer texture from the Cape of Good Hope and Australia. The duty on these wools at present is so very low that it is impossible for American wool-growers to compete with it in market. The tariff asked is 10 cents per pound on these wools, which, it is hoped, will better protect the wool-growing interest of the West. The representations of WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.
